

Redeployment service

People across the hospitality and tourism industry have faced incredibly uncertain times throughout the Covid-19 pandemic and with employers now under intense pressure to streamline operations, the crisis is bringing more distressing news to thousands of workers across the sector.

If you've been made redundant from the hospitality, retail, travel or aviation industries we're here to support you.

Hiring managers across health, social care, logistics, retail and funeral care are seeking motivated and passionate individuals with the attributes and behaviours you hold.

Our goal is to help you capitalise on your transferable skills and transition into a new role with the industry-specific skills you'll need.

What do we offer?

Our redeployment service includes:

A self-assessment to help align you to potential industries and roles. Your responses will help our team to build a profile to promote your expertise to recruiting employers across the health, social care and logistics industries.

A dedicated 1:1 session with a member of our team to discuss your skills, experience, values and attributes. This session enables us to build on the information from your self-assessment and identify which industry your transferable skills will most benefit. Our team then advise on the most appropriate learning package to further enhance your skills, and will begin matching you to available roles.

A comprehensive package of learning to prepare you for a new industry. Worth well over £55, the learning package will give you all the critical industry-specific skills that hiring managers in health, social care or logistics will highly value. Coupled with your transferable skills, this will make you an attractive prospect for any hiring manager!

How much does it cost?

We want this service to be as accessible as possible during these difficult times. We charge £50 (inc VAT) which covers the cost of the learning. We're also encouraging employers to refund this cost to individuals that they recruit through this service.
