

Chiltern Railways Reduced Timetable From Monday 23rd March

Chiltern Railway services from Monday 23rd March will be moving to a reduced timetable to ensure that vital train services for key workers can keep running throughout the Coronavirus outbreak. This timetable will remain in place until further notice, though service levels will be kept under regular review. People needing to travel on Monday should check train times from midday on Sunday 22nd March.

There will be one train per hour in each direction between London Marylebone and Birmingham, Oxford, Aylesbury via High Wycombe and Aylesbury Vale Parkway via the Metropolitan Line. Additional peak services will be provided Monday to Friday and early morning and late evening trains for key workers will still be provided.

The national move to a reduced timetable agreed with the government marks the second phase in the industry's response to the virus. Moving to a reduced timetable balances current significantly reduced levels of demand with the need to reduce the number of people required to run the network, which will help to ensure there are enough staff to keep services running over the coming weeks and months. As a vital artery for Britain, the railway is crucial to ensuring that key workers like nurses, police officers and firefighters can get to work.

New Chiltern train times will be available in journey planners from 12:00 Sunday 22nd March and can be viewed here
